Summary

Will and Hannibal are both elementary school teachers and their students think they should give each other valentines day cards

"Alrighty, class, who's ready to make valentines?" Mr. Graham smiled at his rambunctious group.

"Me!" the group shouted with varying degrees of enthusiasm. Will laughed and set a craft "bucket" at each table. All the students got to work, pouring glue, throwing glitter, and cutting wobbly hearts. A rather chubby girl with fire red curls tugged on Will's khakis, "Mr. Graham?"

"Yes, Freddy?" Will smiled. The little girl grinned back, "Ain't you gonna make Mr. Lecter a card?"

"I'm not sure," Will glanced across the hall at Hannibal, whose hair was full of pink glitter. Will nodded, "I think Mr. Lecter needs a valentine too."

"Come on, Mr. Graham! I'll help you!" Freddy pulled on Will's hand. Will followed the girl to a glitter-covered table. Freddy smiled and sat next to him showing him all the 'good things'.

"Mr. Lecter, are you going on a date with Mr. Graham?" Fredrick smiled. Hannibal knelt down to Fredrick's height, "Why do you ask?"

"Because you ain't makin' a card," Fredrick made a 'duh' noise. Hannibal smiled, "I suppose I should."

At lunch, Freddy took Will's hand and pulled him into the lunchroom. On the other side, Fredrick pulled Hannibal toward the same spot when they met Freddy gave Fredrick a high five and they ran over to the lunch line.

Will shyly passed Hannibal a bright pink card and in turn, Hannibal passed him a red one. Hannibal smiled. the card read 'My design isn't complete without you. How about dinner?'

Hannibal laughed, "Of course I would love to have dinner with you!"

"Oh, thank god," Will sighed. Will opened his card, 'It would be rude if I didn't ask such a handsome man to my table. Shall we see where the evening takes us?' Will kissed Hannibal on the cheek, "Your place it is."

Principal Crawford high-fived the two giggling kids, "Nice work!"
